DIFFICULTIES arising from the nature of the following work, the publisher has been compelled to remove to Philadelphia for the better execution of his plan. The editorial department has in consequence fallen into other hands. Mr. ALLEN's present engagement rendering it impossible to superintend it in another city. The friends and relations of the different signers to the Declaration of Independence are therefore requested to direct their favors to the publisher, No. 443, Market-street, Philadelphia.

PROPOSALS
By Joseph M Sanderson,

For Publishing by Subscription,

A Biography of the Signers
OF THE
Declaration of Independence,

Accompanied with Plates.

To which will be annexed a History of the Proceedings of Congress, during the passage of the Law, and the Declaration itself, with the fac simile Engravings of the Signatures.

By JOHN SANDERSON.

TO THE PUBLIC.

When we consider the personal qualities of the statesmen whose names are affixed to the Declaration of Independence, the perilous occasion which demanded the exercise of their wisdom and deliberation, and the influence of their councils on the interests of mankind, we must acknowledge that very rarely a more imposing spectacle has been offered to the world, and we shall seek in vain in the annals of nations, for an event more worthy of commemoration, and of being cherished forever in the hearts of a grateful and generous people. The love of independence is interwoven with the frame and constitution of the human mind. It is almost the first sentiment that animates the infant's features in the cradle; and amongst all the actions and enterprizes of man, none has awaked into activity a greater exertion of the virtuous energies of his nature, none has excited a greater warmth of veneration, and has more imperious claims upon our gratitude, than resistance to tyranny and political aggression.

In all republican states the first tribute of genius has been paid to the patriot or the hero who has promoted the cause of liberty and maintained the independence and dignity of man. The animated canvas and breathing marble have rescued his features from the grasp of death, and the pen of the historian has inscribed the achievements to the imperishable records of fame. It would indeed be no favorable prognostic of the perpetuity of our republican institutions to discover an insensibility to the obligations we owe the memory of the illustrious patrons of American freedom. They have raised us, by their magnanimity, from the arbitrary dominion of a foreign power, to the distinguished elevation of a sovereign and independent people; they have asserted and maintained the imprescriptible rights of humanity by the "mutual pledge of their pledge of their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honors;" and, as long as virtue holds her empire in the hearts of their successors, the example of these generous benefactors will not be lost to the world; their names will not pass away nor be forgotten, or their glorious deeds be confounded in the common and casual transaction of life.—Ingratitude is a vice that in nations, as well as individuals, indicates the last degree of degeneracy and corruption; it is a vice that implies the absence of every virtue; it was in the age of Caligula that the name of the Scipios was proscribed, that the state of Brutus brought death on its possessor.

"The glory of our ancestors is the light of posterity," and the homage of the living cannot be offered to the merits of the illustrious dead with an effectual or sterile admiration. Great and splendid actions will seldom be achieved by men who have humble or ordinary objects in prospect. It is by contemplating the life and character of those who are marked out from the multitude by their eminent qualities, that we become emulous of their virtues and their renown. The trophies of Miltiades interrupted the sleeps of Themistocles; and Theseus, hearing the exploits of Hercules, was fired with his spirit, and became the successful rival of his fame. The rude savage of the desert listens with rapture to the deeds of his ancestors, and hangs around his hut the emblems of his father's valour.

More need not be said to enforce the utility of the publication we have undertaken, and which we now submit to the patronage of our fellow-citizens, with a hope, that from the liberality of their encouragement, we shall be able to present it to the public worthy of their approbation. We must depend for the illustration of many of the characters of our biography upon the generosity of their surviving relatives and friends, to furnish us with whatever interesting materials may be in their possession; for which, with our grateful acknowledgments, we promise a copy of the entire work as a compensation.

CONDITIONS.

I. The work will be published in numbers or half volumes of 200 pages, octavo, and contained in ten numbers. To the first will be prefixed an appropriate frontispiece—and the work will be commenced with the declaration of independence, with engraved fac similes of the signatures, and a compendious detail of the proceedings of congress, during the passage of the law. Each of the lives, unless when it is impracticable, will be preceded by a likeness of the person, engraved by the best artists in the United States.

II. It will be printed on fine paper, made expressly for the purpose, and delivered to subscribers at two dollars and fifty cents per number, payable on delivery.

From the Philadelphia Balance.

"CALL AGAIN."

Full many of the ills we know
In this dark scene of sin,
From two poor words may often flow;
For instance, these are appropos,
Tho' simple—'Call Again!'

Go, mark the wrinkled virgin's doom,
Whom hundreds sought to win;
Why fades so soon her beauty's bloom—
Why mourn no lovers round her tomb?
She bids them—'Call Again!'

Why sinks that youth, despised, forgot—
Weighed down with pain and sin?
When Wisdom spoke he listened not—
When Virtue urged him to her cot,
He answered—'Call Again!'

When Paul before great Felix stood,
With firm and godlike mien—
When cold ran Felix' noble blood,
What said he to the man of God?
Alas! 'twas—'Call Again!'

I knew a wretch so very poor
That dunned through life he'd been;
And when grim Death knock'd at his door,
So oft he'd spoke the words before,
He answered—'Call Again!'

The moral of my verse I'll show,
Nor is the moral mean;
A debt to nature all men owe,
And Death's a sheriff whom we know
Will heed no—'Call Again!'

Yet there is ONE, whose voice once more
Shall break the sleep of sin;
His wrath upon the godless pour,
Fast bolt the everlasting door,
Then NEVER—'Call Again!'

Lockman, the celebrated Persian moralist, relates the following story of himself: "I was once," said he, "so poor, that I had not wherewith to buy me a pair of shoes, and was obliged to go barefooted. However patient I had been till then, I was become very dissatisfied with my lot, and entered the temple of Cuffa, extremely melancholy and discontented. I there saw a man who had no legs. Reflecting on his condition, I no longer complained of wanting shoes, but gave thanks to God from the bottom of my heart, that I could still walk, though barefooted. How much better is it, thought I, to be without shoes than without legs! If this poor man could recover his legs, how extatic would be his joy, though he would have no shoes."

"There is more sin in an inordinate attachment to lawful things than we are aware of; that which is lawful in itself, is not so, when it has ascendency in the mind."

"It is the perfection of holiness to do what God loves, and love what God does."

LOQUACITY.

Weak men are generally most loquacious, thinking to make up that in number of words, which is wanting in weight.

A certain delirious man went into church one Sunday, and peaceably seated himself, in sermon time.—Looking round the meeting house, he observed some of the congregation sleeping, and being accidentally armed with a pocket full of rotten apples, he drew them forth one by one, and taking aim, let them drive slap into the faces of the sleeping christians. This was repeated several times, to the no small diversion of the audience—but the parson at length observing his conduct, desired the people to take care of the "crazy man;" who, hearing it, cried out, "You mind your preaching, and I'll keep the dogs awake."

ANECDOTES

Of the late Joseph Dennie.

Mr. Dennie was remarkable for penning down any brilliant metaphor which pleased his imagination, on a small slip of paper, and preserve those slips in his hat, until he had leisure to incorporate them in an essay. One of these we remember to have seen in his hat after his decease: 'I was much delighted by the gorgeous decorations of human life, until I passed behind the scenes and noticed the clumsy apparatus.'

Mr. D. was extremely felicitous in his quotations; he was once relating to a friend that some literary gentlemen had arisen in Boston, with whom he was acquainted, he exclaimed with a sigh, that 'they knew not Joseph.'

In a small complimentary note, that he left on the writing desk of a friend, at that time absent, when the writer was laboring under great personal debility—after complaining of his indisposition, he took this mode of informing his friend that he would favor him with another call at twelve o'clock, 'at twelve the ghost will walk again.'

[Baltimore Chronicle.

ALEXANDRIA:

FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 29.

His excellency M. Hyde de Neuville, the French Minister, lady and suite, sailed from New-York for Havre, in the ship Stephania, on Tuesday last.

COMMERCE OF QUEBEC.

Six hundred and twelve square rigged vessels have arrived at the port of Quebec, the present season, and have brought out 12,434 settlers. These added to the number which have arrived at the different ports in the United States, cannot fall short of 50,000, which have emigrated from Europe, within the last year. —— [N. Y. E. Post.

Charleston, October 22.

FROM HAVANA.

By the schr. Comet, accounts are received to the 8th inst. inclusive, Flour was down to 17½ dollars, sales dull; last sales of rice 8¼ dollars; clean white Carolina would command 9 a 9½ dollars. Business was getting brisk. The Eliza, Chazal, was to sail for this port, on the 11th or 12th inst. The brig Mary-Ann, Selby, had arrived at Havana, in 7 days from this port. The Margaret, Sustacha, had not yet arrived from Nassau, (N. P.)

Boston, October 23.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE LATE GALE.

The following information has been received in town from Gloucester, by the schr. Reliance, arrived at that port, from Ponce, (Porto Rico.)

On the 22d Sept. experienced a very severe hurricane. Before sailing, heard from all the neighboring islands. At St. Thomas it was very severe. 95 vessels were on shore, and 127 men missing; the lower part of the town very much injured. At Tortula, every vessel on shore and the town entirely destroyed, only two houses standing—the Governor of the Island and his family were all drowned in his own house, and many other lives lost. At the city of St. John's, Porto Rico, every vessel went on shore, and considerable many buildings destroyed—about 120 lives lost, principally slaves. At Mayaquet, all the vessels in port on shore. At St. Bartholomews, and the Windward Islands, much the same as has been reported. No American vessels at Ponce, Oct. 4.

Norfolk, October 25.

Arrived, Privateer schr. Almeida, of nine guns, George Wilson, commander, (under the Venezuelian flag,) last from a cruise.—On the 1st inst. off Cape Antonta, had a severe engagement with a Spanish ship (a King's packet) of 16 guns, and, as was afterwards understood, of 136 men, including some troops which she was carrying from Vera Cruz to Havana, and after an action of two hours, the Almeida was obliged to haul off, having her rigging very much cut up, one man killed, and Captain Wilson badly wounded.—The Almeida spoke, Sept. 3d, off Mona, schnr. Luminary, King, 17 days out from Baltimore, bound to Porto Cabello; 27th, in lat. 21, lon. 81, brig Mechanic, Gillet, 9 days from Trinidad-de-Cuba bound to New-York; 30th, in lat. 21. 4, lon. 64; schnr. Adeline, Ellis, 4 days out from do. bound to Boston; Oct. 3d, in lat. 23. 30, same lon. schnr. Emily, ——, 33 days out from St. Jago-de-Cuba, bound to Alexandria, in distress, and out of provisions, supplied her; 8th, in lat. 24. 30, lon. 80, brig William Penn, Berk, 29 days from New-Orleans bound to Bordeaux, said they had been robbed by a Spanish ship.

COMMERCIAL.

Extract of a letter from Naples, 17th August, 1819, to a merchant in Boston.

"SIR—We now wait on you with our commercial advices.

"Colonials—Sales of sugars have been extensive of late, and we calculate on an advance in price as the Salerno fair approaches, which begins 20th Sept. Coffee and cocoa will be good articles next winter.

"Light Buenos Ayres Hides weighing 15 a 18 lb. each, and bees-wax, always saleable.

"Codfish promises well this year, we calculate 5½ a 5¾ dollars per q!. will be obtained for the first cargoes of the English catch. The American small dry fish sells for 1¾ dols. less, large fish must be avoided.

"India Piece Goods, say Cossas and Mamodies, 20 by 1 1-8 yards, in small parcels, will answer, being an article of great consumption both here and in Sicily; there are none at market; but the English Company Long Cloths, double piece, sell currently at 8 dolls. 40 cents per piece, net—fair quality goods are what we require, duties being the same, fine or coarse.

"Bengal Cotton—The duty has been reduced on this article from 20 to 10 ducats per cantar, which favors the importation. Sales were made latterly at 15 dolls. 76 cts. per cwt. nett of duty.

"Silks—The crop in this neighborhood has been tolerably fair; that of Calabria not so abundant.

The London Packet bring papers to the 15th ult but they are only filled with localities uninteresting to the American reader.

Sir Thomas Hardy's squadron had sailed from Plymouth. Mr. Thornton, the new British minister to the Brazils, embarked on board the commodore's ship, the Superb.—Sir Thomas, it is said, had sealed orders, which are not to be opened till he reaches a certain latitude. Each ship is in fine fighting trim, being put upon the full war establishment, both as to seamen and to marines, with an extra supply of stores. This, a London paper remarks, at a period of profound peace, bespeaks not only a long and active service, but a distant station.

"I have now the painful duty to record a most atrocious act of piracy. On the evening of the 25th inst. two boats of suspicious character were run on shore, a little to windward of this place, by the harbor master's boat, when the crews abandoned them and fled to the woods—the boats were taken possession of and brought here. There were several muskets found in them, and some traces of blood, which gave rise to suspicion, and guards were immediately dispatched in pursuit of the fugitives, and next day three of them were apprehended, amongst whom was the captain of the gang, who confessed that they had captured two vessels; one a Spaniard, and the other an American, which they had concealed on the coast to windward, in a small bay near Aquia. He was taken on board the government ketch (lying in the harbor) which, with the La Mouche schooner of war, got under way immediately in search of them, and yesterday returned with both prizes in their possession, but unfortunately did not get any more of the pirates. Last night a sailor belonging to the American schooner (named George A. Emmel) was sent down from Aquia, where he had given himself up to the commandant of that place, who has given me the following information:

"That he belonged to the American schr. Blazing Star, captain Snow, of and from Baltimore, bound for St. Jago de Cuba, with a cargo of flour, &c.—that they were captured whilst lying too off the Moro Castle, waiting for a pilot—that the cook (a black man) and himself, were confined below, where they were detained half an hour, and then released. On coming on deck he demanded where the captain and the rest of the crew were, and was told that they had been put in a small canoe with a bag of bread to find their way on shore. Some time after the pirates had been in possession of the schooner, they fell in with the brig —— of Wilmington, bound from St. Thomas to N. Orleans, out of which they took as much coffee as they could stow on board the small schooner captured from the Spaniards, and then released her—that he was kept closely on board by the pirates, until the schooner was re-taken by the above vessels, when they all fled on shore; he then made his way to Aquia, and gave himself up to the authorities at that place. He also says that four or five days ago, the cook took an opportunity of throwing himself into the sea, when about three miles from shore.

"This band of villains, 13 in number, left this place it is said about a month since, in a small barge: between this and Cape Tiberoon, they captured a barge much larger than their own, with which they proceeded to the coast of Cuba, where they captured the small Spanish schooner mentioned above, manned her, (after murdering her crew in all probability) and sunk their barge: in this schooner they captured the Blazing Star.

"The Blazing Star will be sent from this to Port-au-Prince, when I hope some American merchant will put in a claim on behalf of those concerned. I am informed that the schooner has about 500 barrels of flour on board, and I presume but little of her cargo has been squandered. If any thing further should transpire previous to the Rising Sun's departure, I shall inform you thereof.

"Mac Gregor sailed from here last night, in the dark, with a mere remnant of his expedition, without clothing, and almost destitute of every thing else necessary for any enterprize; his destination is not known, and nobody cares; we thank our stars that we have at last got rid of such a fellow."

New-York, Oct. 25

No sovereign of modern times, has discovered more extraordinary qualities of mind, than the emperor of Russia. Having passed thro' scenes of the most interesting, and, indeed, terrific character, since his accession to the throne of that immense empire, and seen universal peace succeed to the storms which had wasted and impoverished Europe during nearly a quarter of a century, immediately upon the restoration of general tranquility, he began to execute the laborious plan of civilizing, instructing, and christianizing, the countless tribes of his almost boundless dominions. To the accomplishment of this great object, he has for several years bent all the powers of his comprehensive and benevolent mind, assisted by the talents and labors of his ministers and distinguished officers of government. And the progress that they have already made cannot fail to astonish every observer.

We have been accustomed, in this country, to consider the Russian nation, as a vast horde of barbarians, without knowledge, and without civilization. This idea has come down from the period of the reign of Peter the Great, who has himself been considered as at least half savage. Is is difficult, at this distance of time, and with such imperfect information as we possess of the true state of things in Russia a century ago, to form a true estimate of the character of such a monarch as Peter. He was undoubtedly a great man—and laid the foundation of the flourishing and powerful empire, over which Alexander now reigns with such distinguished reputation.

What will be the result of the astonishing advancement of this mighty nation in moral as well as physical force, upon the surrounding nations, it is not easy to conjecture.—Should the present emperor's life be prolonged to the ordinary age of men, and the empire advance in improvement for the ensuing twenty or thirty years, in proportion as it has for six years past, by the close of the period above mentioned, in the hands of an able ambitious man, it will be able to give laws to Europe.

Our thoughts have been turned to this subject, by reading the following article in the Christian Observer, for August, 1819. It discloses the rapid progress that is making in the gigantic plans of the Czar, and at the same time furnishes matter for serious consideration and reflection on the events of the times.

The emperor of Russia, among his other zealous efforts for the extension of religion and learning, has issued an edict for a new institution of great importance, to be entitled "The University of St. Petersburgh." It is on a large and liberal plan. The three principal faculties will be, 1st. Philosophical and Juridical sciences; 2d. The Physical and Mathematical sciences; 5d. the Historical and Philological sciences. The most eminent professors, Russian and foreign, are to be engaged.

The new system of education is also widely extending in Russia; and a considerable number of schools are in action for educating the children of soldiers, upon this economical and efficient plan. Even in Siberia there is an establishment for training masters, who, when qualified, are sent to different parts of the empire; and in the neighborhood of Odessa, in the south of Russia, there are schools for above 10,000 of the Russian troops. At Petersburgh, there is a school for the children of soldiers, extremely well organized; and another for 250 persons, has been opened for the soldiers themselves, a certain number of whom are taken out of the different regiments, in order, when qualified, that they may teach others, by this method. The progress they make, particularly the Cossacks, is represented as quite astonishing. In the space of fifteen days, several who did not previously know a letter, were able to read short words, and even to write them on a slate. Prince Alexander Galitzin, the minister of public instruction, has laid before the emperor an extensive set of reading lessons, from the Holy Scriptures, for the use of all schools upon the same plan in Russia, of which the emperor has expressed his high approbation, and has ordered the payment of the expense of printing a large edition.—These lessons are very extensive, and consist of three parts: 1. Historical Lessons, from the Old Testament. 2. Our duties towards God and Man. 3. A brief Harmony of the four Gospels, with some of the most striking facts in the Acts of the Gospels. The selection is made in the words of the text, without note or comment, and the whole is printed in common Russ.

FIRES IN CONSTANTINOPLE, AND CONDUCT OF THE TURKS AT THEM.

From Dallaway's Travels in the Levant.

Fires are so frequent, that few months pass without them, and they are generally so furious, that whole districts are laid in ashes.* Houses are so soon re-erected, that the former appearance of the streets is speedily restored, and little alteration is ever made in their form. Notice of a fire in Constantinople, or at Galata, is given by beating a great drum of two high towers; the night-watch then patrole the streets, striking the pavements with their staves shod with iron, and crying out Yangen var,—"There is a fire," naming the place. The Sultan is then summoned three times, and when the conflagration has lasted one hour, he is forced to attend in person, and to bring mules with him laden with piastres, which he distributes with his own hands to the firemen, who are very inactive before his arrival. These are armed against accidents in the same manner as they are in London, and are equally expert and adventurous. Fires are extinguished by pulling down the adjoining houses, for the engines are very small, and borne upon the shoulders of two men.

The perfect resignation with which a good Musulman sees his house consumed by the flames, and himself reduced from affluence to poverty, has been often and justly remarked by others; he exclaims Allah Karim; that "God is merciful," without apparent emotion, and has assured himself that the same Providence which hath made him poor and abject, can once more restore him to wealth if it be his fate. As to the women, they have not the praise of such philosophy. They assemble in a group near the sultan, and unmercifully load him with the bitterest revilings, particularizing his own crimes, and the errors of his government, and charging him with the cause of the present calamity. At such rencounters no crowned head need envy Sultan Selim his situation. As this is the only privileged time of conveying the voice of the people to his ears, and as women in Turkey say any thing with impunity, it is presumed that many of the fires are not accidental.

As a grand spectacle, detaching the idea of commiseration of the calamity from the present view, if a volcanic eruption be excepted, none can exceed a great fire at Constantinople. The houses being constructed with wood, and frequently communicating with magazines filled with combustible materials, a vast column of flame, of the most luminous glow, rises from the centre, which lighting up the mosques, and contiguous cypress groves, produces an effect of superior magnificence. In other cities where the buildings are of stone, the flames are seen partially, or are overpowered with smoke.

* In 1663 seventy thousand houses were burnt; and in 1778 the conflagration was so extensive, as to threaten the universal destruction of the city.

Translated from the Minerve Francaise, No. 81, for the American Centinel.

LETTERS ON GERMANY.

Frankfort, Aug. 6, 1819.

It will be difficult to give any thing else than conjectures respecting the real amount of the pretended conspiracies in which so many young men and grave professors are implicated. The inquiry is carried on, as usual, in the shade of the most profound mystery; and the orders of arrest issued by the police express no motive, and describe no offence. The official gazette of Berlin itself declares, that the administrative authorities alone have been hitherto entrusted with the whole procedure. It appears, that the Prussian Minister of police has determined to give a striking contradiction to several journalists who have pointed him out as a convert to liberal principles. Be that as it may, there is one remark, which has not escaped those who observe with some attention the actual state of things. At the same time that the German universities were denounced as being in a state of conspiracy against the governments, scandalous scenes were agitating the school of law at Paris, and the Courier of London accused the schoolmasters of England of inculcating into the minds of their pupils, maxims contrary to the laws and to the established order. The news reached me, at the same moment, that serious disturbances had broken out in several secondary colleges of the principality of Lippe Detmold. Is sedition, after having run through the establishments of a higher grade, about to take possession of the village schools? Shall we have conspirators of twelve years old, and shall the ferula be unable to reduce to reason these new Catalines?—Have all these movements, almost simultaneous, and almost similar, been combined on purpose, and be traced to a common centre? Have all the youth of Europe formed a coalition, in order to execute the plan of a vast revolution? Can they tell us, where are the ambassadors, the treasures, the spies, the means of correspondence, which these universities have at their disposal? Until they can give us these indispensable explanations we will not suffer ourselves to believe that the revolutionary manuvres, about which so much noise is made, exist any where but in the brain of some pretended politicians, who are terrified at the progress of liberal doctrines; and we shall rest satisfied, that this great conspiracy is only a ridiculous chimera, because we are so unfortunate as to think, that it is nothing but an atrocious fiction.—Our only fear is, that by fighting against imaginary dangers, we shall create real ones; that by teasing a peaceably and faithful population, we shall succeed in exciting dangerous passions. Do they think of this? These youth whom they are pursuing with so much fury into the sanctuary of their useful labors, are they not the whole hope of the country? Are they not sufficiently numerous to form very soon a nation? It was Paricies who was not only a great orator, but a true statesman that said, after a defeat, in which the whole youth of Athens had perished, that the year had lost its spring. In truth the men who preside over the destinies of nations, are sometimes guilty of most extraordinary forgetfulness. There is a very simple thing, of which they do not appear to have even dreamed; it is that all the young men who are now twenty years old, will in twenty years more be forty. If this reflection, which is so natural, had not escaped them, they would have abstained from the greatest part of the measures, in which they have engaged with such an inconceivable levity. The issue of the struggle in which they are at this moment engaged, cannot be doubtful; it may be deemed to be, the struggle of the present with the future, in order to revive the past.

A report has prevailed, that the constitution of the grand duchy of Darmstadt was definitively determined, and that it would be published at the first opportunity. Several of your journals have sanctioned this news, which is entirely destitute of foundation I can assure you, on the contrary, that in a council recently held at the house of the grand duke, the majority of the opinions were for an indefinite postponement. M. de Lichtenberg, the leading minister, who was for the University, has been removed from office.—His successor is a particular friend of the Prussian minister d'Otterstaed. All the inhabitants of the grand duchy expect numerous arrests. This was the first state of Germany in which the citizens resolutely refused to pay the contributions until they were agreed to by a representative body. They do justice to the personal sentiments of the grand duke. Liberal ideas have in him a partisan, but not a protector.—His whole family, the declared protectors of the aristocratic interests, oppose between him and the friends of liberty, an impenetrable barrier, and paralyse his intentions by their ascendancy over him. The grand duke, devoted exclusively to the pursuits of literature and the fine arts, abandon the cares of government to unskilful or headstrong ministers. This prince is another example of the inutility of the virtues of a sovereign, so long as he wants that free and enlightened will which can alone direct its employment. What would he have to fear in yielding to his own inclination and the legitimate wishes of his subjects? Would they denounce him for having faithfully executed the 13th article of the act of confederation. Would they dispute his right to furnish his duties more than they did in regard to Bavaria, Saxe Weymar and Baden, where the constitutional government has been peaceably established? Diplomatic menaces, I know, have been addressed to the sovereign of the last state; he has not defied them, and it is a misfortune. The people of Baden have, however been put in possession of a representative government; legislative chambers have solemnly marked at the commencement of the constitutional era, and verified their rights, by exercising them. Their sudden adjournment is a stroke of policy, which does not make a less impression on the grand duke than on the nation. When complaining of the spirit of opposition which had reigned in the elective chamber, he said enough to let it be understood, that the measure of adjournment had been imposed upon him, and that his dearest wish was ere long to recal around him the representatives of the people. I am not sure that I do not expose him by paying him this homage, but I dare to affirm, that so long as he shall respect the constitution, he will be strong enough to bid defiance to every threat, however haughty it may be. He will insure the independence of his crown, by protecting the liberty of his subjects.

The clashing of the legislative session in Bavaria, effected almost at the same moment as at Carlsruhe, might readily be referred to the same cause, and to be an act of obedience to the same will; but essential differences are observable, to the advantage of the grand ducal government. There all the constitutional forms were carefully observed; they were all violated at Munich. The grand duke, in closing the legislature before it had decided on the budget, has exercised hastily, but legally, the prerogative with which the constitution invests him, and which authorises him to determine the provisional regulation of the taxes.

The Bavarian government, in rejecting the reductions sanctioned by a definitive vote, has placed it beyond the constitution. Its budget has been formally annulled. It was necessary to accept that of the chambers, or to submit to be without taxes. The alternative is severe. Every disposition contrary to this principle is a mere act of violence. A law of finance has this peculiarity, that all the prescriptions which it contain, imply the necessary abrogation of the analogous prescriptions contained in the law which it is intended to supply. In reducing to 7,70 ,000 florins the war budget, which had been proposed at 8,000,000 by the government, the legislative body positively declares, that they do not intend that that sum should be collected. Their intention in this respect is perfectly clear, and to re-establish the disbursements, on the footing of the former valuation, is a direct infringement of that will, and a bold acknowledgement of peculation.

It is otherwise in relation to laws which have not for their object the public taxes. If the government submit to the deliberation of the legislative body, a plan relative to the institution of jury trial, and it is rejected, the judicial organization remains in its former state, because the states have only been called on to declare directly respecting the jury, and not respecting the organization itself, to which the jury in that event would succeed. Here the proposition has but one aspect, and the vote of the delegates of the people applies but to a single question. In a question of impost, on the contrary, two very distinct questions require the solution of the legislative body. Shall the project of the government be adopted? and in case of a negative, what system shall it be agreed to substitute in its place? In the business before them the chamber began by rejecting the ministerial proposition in relation to the war budget; it then fixed the sum which the wants of the service seemed to require. It is very evident, that the minister cannot, without rendering himself culpable, replace the credit which was granted him, by that which was refused. You will probably be surprised, gentlemen, at the care which I have taken to insist on a principle so incontestible, but constitutional doctrines are not yet as familiar to us as to Frenchmen, and we are not in want of civilians who are interested in rendering them obscure. I am, &c.

S. Drew, Merchant Tailor, removed from Fairfax-street to the corner of King and Columbus streets, and his prices falling,

RESPECTFULLY acquaints his customers and the citizens in general that he has removed as above, where he will study to give satisfaction. He has by him a small but well assorted stock of goods, which will be found on inspection to be of the best quality, the whole of which he wishes to sell low for cash, and as further inducements to purchasers he offers to cut out any goods, bought of him to any size or pattern gratis.

S Drew aware, of the advantage a ready money business has over one where long credit is given, thinks that a distinction ought to be made in the prices in each case: and as the price of provisions are low at present, he is glad to be able to announce to those customers who will feel disposed to pay him ready money for his work, that he will reduce the price of making to them according to the present journeymen's wages; and to prevent any supposed imposition on the one hand or disatisfaction on the other he is willing to be goverued by the printed regulations of prices by which the journeymen are paid in Alexandria.

N. B. Bread, flour, beef, groceries, liquors or any thing valuable taken in exchange for clothes.

S Drew has this day opened a tavern in the same house, where he has laid in a supply of Philadelphia and the district porter and ale, together with liquors of the best quality, and he feels confident that he shall be able to give satisfaction to all who will please to favor him with a call.—He is fitting up his house for the accommodation of boarders, travellers, &c. and from its central situation, good beds and stabling, together with other requisites, he presumes that it will be found a convenient establishment.

Was Committed,

TO the jail for the county of Alexandria on the 3d inst. as a runaway, a negro man called BEN HENDERSON, supposed to be the property of George Thornton, of King George county. The said negro is about 50 years of age; 5 feet 6 inches high; bald head; and a shoemaker by trade. The owner is desired to come prove property, pay charges, and take him away, otherwise he will be disposed of as the law directs.

100 Dollars Reward.

RAN away on the 28th of April, from the farm of the subscriber, in Dogue Neck, Fairfax Co. Virginia, negro HARRY, aged about twenty three years, about five feet ten inches high, very black, well built, has a considerable impediment in his speech, when spoken to evinces much confusion, and replies almost unintelligibly: had on when he left home, a much worn suit of domestic cloth. I have every reason to believe that he is endeavoring to pass for a free man, and as such went off in some of the bay craft during the late fishing season. All masters of vessels are forewarned from harboring or taking into their employ said negro, under penalty of having the law rigidly enforced against them. I will give twenty dollars, if taken in the county of Fairfax, or district of Columbia; if beyond that distance, the above reward, provided he is secured in jail so that I get him again. WM. MASON.
Charles County, Md. June 1.

The editors of the National Intelligencer and Baltimore Federal Gazette will insert the above until forbid, and send their accounts to Port Tobacco for payment.
June 11 tf

100 Dollars Reward.

I WILL give the above reward to any person who will return to my possession, negro LAWRENCE, who assumes the sirname of FENWICK. This fellow left my farm, on the Wicomico river, in Charles county, Md. on the 6th July, in consequence of his own outrageous conduct towards my overseer. He is a negro of a fine erect figure, good features, asmooth black skin, rather above the middle stature, of a youthful appearance for one of thirty years of age, and of great plausibility and natural smartness. His ears grow remarkably close to his head, and on the inside of his lower lip he has a white mark or spot. I purchased him 4 years ago of the estate of Mrs. P. H. Courts, of this county. I am led (by circumstances which have come to my knowledge since he absconded,) to believe that he will endeavor to make his way to King George county, Va.; should he not take this route, he will probably be met with in the District of Columbia, or in the upper counties of this state, on his way to Pennsylvania. I apprehend he will change his name, and if committed to jail, refuse to state to whom he belongs, as the misconduct which preceded his departure, & his absconding, have all appeared since to have been premeditated. He took all his clothes with him, of which he had a large number; among them—a new bearskin over-coat, a long close-bodied blue coat, a pair of striped jean pantaloons, one or more white waistcoats, besides many articles of coarse cloathing; these, however, he will probably exchange, or sell them for cash to defray his travelling expenses.

I will give the above reward to any person who will bring him home to me, or FIFTY DOLLARS if confined in jail, and notice given me, so that I recover him.—Should he be taken out of the state, I will also pay all reasonable costs and charges which may attend the bringing him home.

PROSPECTUS

Of a new periodical work to be publish d in the city of Washington, entitled the Washington Theological REPERTORY.

EDITORS. { Rev. Wm Hawley, Washington,
Rev. Wm. H. Wilmer, Alexandria,
Rev. Oliver Norris, Alexandria,
Rev Reuel Keith, Georgetown.

Assisted by several other literary gentlemen of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

IF any apology were necessary for this undertaking, it may be found in the fact, that there is no publication on a similar plan, in all that section of our country lying south of New-York, and but one in the whole of the United States. It has been matter of equal surprize and regret, that the Episcopal Church should be so far behind other Christian denominations, in similar efforts to disseminate the principles of religion and piety. At a period like the present, when the Lord is preparing his way on earth, by the most remarkable efforts of human agency, and the most wonderful operations of his providence and grace—when we perceive in every part of Christendom, a praise-worthy emulation to share in the glorious work of filling the earth with the knowledge of the only true God, and his Son Jesus Christ; it would seem criminal for any to withhold their exertions, however feeble, in the great enterprize of human happiness and salvation. The editors have, therefore, felt it their duty to make this humble effort to supply this acknowledged deficiency on the part of the church in this section of the country, and to bear their share in the common exertions of Christians to promote the Redeemer's Kingdom. And having obtained the services of a gentleman, in whose talents and principles they have confidence, whose time will be wholly devoted to the superintendence of the work, they feel encouraged to solicit the patronage of the public.

The publication will be conducted under the immediate inspection and control of the above named editors, who will form a committee to review every article intended for publication. The principles upon which it will be conducted are those of the bible, as illustrated in the articles, Liturgy and Homilies of the Protestant Episcopal Church. As members of this church the editors will feel bound to support the Apostolical character of her institutions, the pious tendency of her rites and ceremonies, and the evangelical nature of her doctrines. But in these, and all other discussions, they hope never to loose sight of that great law of charity which teaches us to "preserve the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

Acting upon those catholic principles, so long and so successively pursued by "The Christian Observer," their chief object will be to inculcate sound theological knowledge, and to delineate and recommend pure and vital religion. They trust therefore, that while the members of every Christian denomination may find something edifying and instructive, none will discover any just cause for offence in the pages of this work. General subjects of biblical criticism, practical illustrations of scriptural truth, the biography of illustrious persons, evidences of the truth of revelation, essays on the history and polity of the church, reviews of interesting publications, religious, literary and philosophical intelligence—in short, whatever is connected with the promotion of religion, humanity and literature, will find a place in this repository.

The testimony of experience supersedes the necessity of dwelling on the advantages of a periodical publication on the plan proposed. Its obvious tendency will be to render the various departments of religious knowledge more easy and accessible, and give a more ready currency and wider circulation, to those great truths which involve the present welfare and future destiny of man.

It will tend powerfully to stimulate the exertions of the editors, and console them under the difficulties attendant on the prosecution of this work, amidst many other avocations, should it prove the means under the blessing of God, of enriching any of its readers with the saving knowledge of Christ, and prepare them for a participation in the felicity and glory of his heavenly kingdom. With this hope they commit it into his hands, and confidently solicit their brethren of the clergy and laity to assist them in carrying into effect the objects of the undertaking.

TERMS OF THE WORK.

A volume of the Repertory shall consist of twelve numbers, of which one shall be published on the first day of every month, containing thirty-two large octavo pages, stitched in blue, and attended with a table of contents.

The paper used in the work shall be good, and the typography executed with the greatest care.

The price of a volume is two dollars, payable in advance; to such as omit the advance, two dollars and fifty cents.

It is designed to enlarge the size of the work, without increasing the price, as soon as one thousand subscribers shall be obtained.

Communications and remittances may be directed to any of the editors, post paid.

Any person becoming responsible for five subscribers, shall receive a sixth copy gratis.

The first number may be expected in the month of July. June26
